

Palm Beach Equine Clinic: Delivering Excellence at Premier Events This Spring

This spring, Palm Beach Equine Clinic in Wellington, FL, isn't just attending the biggest stages in North American sport; it's caring for the best equine athletes in the game.

From Winter Equestrian Festival Rolex CSI5* Week (March 23–29) to the electric beachfront setting of the Longines Global Champions Tour Miami (April 1–4), and culminating at the prestigious FEI World Cup™ Finals (April 8–13), PBEC veterinarians are at the center of the action, ensuring the world's top equine athletes perform at their best.

The momentum begins in Ocala during the Longines League of Nations Ocala, where the sport's elite converge. As international horses transition from USDA CEM quarantine in Ocala to Wellington, PBEC plays a critical role in their care. Under the leadership of Dr. Janet Greenfield, the team oversees the veterinary needs of these elite athletes within Wellington's tightly managed competition "bubble," as they prepare for the Winter Equestrian Festival's Rolex CSI5* week, which hosts the US Equestrian Open Jumping Final.

While fans focus on the spotlight in the arena, PBEC works tirelessly behind the scenes. As horses arrive for the Miami leg of the Longines Global Champions Tour, Dr. Kathleen Timmins and Dr. Sarah Allendorf provide around-the-clock veterinary supervision for European and North American contenders from the moment they arrive.

The circuit doesn't stop there. Dr. Christopher Elliott heads to Fort Worth, TX, to serve as the veterinary service manager at the FEI World Cup™ Finals, one of the sport's most prestigious international championships. PBEC's expertise extends into the dressage arena, where Dr. Weston Davis and Dr. Sidney Chanutin support top horses, including those representing Zen Elite Equestrian Center, title sponsor of the FEI Dressage World Cup™ Final.

Across disciplines and every level of elite competition, PBEC is a constant — trusted by the best, present at the biggest moments, and integral to the success of world-class equestrian sport.
